ABOUT STREET LIGHTS

West Liberty has been without street lights for some time due to the refusal or inability of the utilities company to furnish satisfactory service.

Some months ago the town board of trustees notified the company that the service was not satisfactory and that we no longer expected to pay for lights that the company did not furnish. The answer of one Mr. Hodge, Ashland manager of the company, was that it was very easy to cut off the street lights for a few hours when the load became too heavy for the power plant. In other words, the present power plant cannot furnish enough current at all times for use in our homes and also carry the street lights. Mr. Hodge asked whether we would not rather do without street lights than without lights in our homes. As chairman of the board, I told him yes, but then I saw no reason why we should pay for lights they failed to furnish.

Our citizens will remember the kind of "service" we were getting on our street lights. We had been paying the full contract price, $34 a month, $403 a year—about half of the total property tax revenue of the town—although some nights the lights were not on at all and some other nights only a few hours, and very rarely were they on during the first hours of darkness when they were most needed.

When the lights go off in our homes there is some comfort, even while we sit in darkness, in remembering that our lights are on a meter and that we are not being charged for the absence of light. The town, however, paid a flat rate for lights during specified hours, and for many months we paid for almost as much darkness as light.

Finally we refused to pay one month's bill. The company has persistently refused even to promise any better service, and the board felt that the taxpayers were entitled to some consideration. The company, well knowing they could not enforce collection of a bill for service not rendered, completely cut off the lights, although it was plainly understood we were willing to pay for lights if they would furnish the lights.

I am giving you these plain facts because some of our good people have not completely understood the situation. I have not been alone in this fight for justice to our taxpayers. I believe the board was unanimously agreed on this question. I refer you to them as to whether I have stated the facts. We are not opposed to street lights. We want them. But we are not willing to pay for lights that we don't get.

There have been several robberies in town lately and some few persons have suggested that they happened because the street lights are off. Well, there was a series of robberies in and around town a year or so ago, when we had street lights of a sort. Furthermore, we never have had street lights after 11 p.m., and a thief usually prefers later hours. But if and when we can get real service at a reasonable price, I shall favor street lights all night long and not merely until 11 o'clock.

ROSCO BRONG, Chairman, West Liberty Town Board of Trustees.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENTERTAINED

The young people's division of the M. E. church decorated the basement in Halloween mystery, even to the bridal chamber and the death chamber. They then invited the Christian Endeavor to their program Sunday at 7:15 p.m.

After conducting their guests thru the mysterious chambers, they seated them at the tables and served coffee and homemade doughnuts.

The president, Miss Helen Price, presided. Miss Virginia Nickell read the scripture and Rev. Clyde Wheeler offered prayer. Miss Nell Caskey extended a hearty welcome in her most gracious manner. The theme for the evening was "Knocking Off the Corners." Parts had been assigned to Mrs. Wreather and Rev. Boggs, who gave interesting talks. Miss Ethel Mae Keeton led a round table discussion on the same subject. The meeting then adjourned.

DON'T WANT THE JOB

To the voters of West Liberty: In the campaign for Police Judge of West Liberty, whispered charges have been made that I was seeking, or if the election went a certain way I would receive, the appointment of Town Marshall.

I wish to say that I do not desire the position of Town Marshall and will not accept it if it is offered to me. WM. MCKENZIE SR.

VOTE NO ON LIQUOR

Kentucky voters will have another chance to vote on the liquor question on November 5. On the top right hand corner of your ballot will be printed "Constitutional Amendment No. 1," reading as follows:

Constitutional Amendment to Repeat Prohibition and to Provide for Local Option

Are you in favor of repeal of the amendment to the Constitution of Kentucky which prohibits the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors, except for sacramental, medicinal, scientific or mechanical purposes, and the re-enactment and re-adoption of Section 61 of said Constitution, which requires the General Assembly, by general law, to provide a means whereby the sense of the people of any county, city, town, district or precinct may be taken, as to whether or not spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned therein or the sale thereof regulated?

If the "wets" have got you and you want more liquor, more wrecked homes, more wrecked lives, more wrecked cars, there is nothing to prevent you from voting "Yes" and helping your cause along.

If you are opposed to liquor and the misery which results from its use, you will want to vote "Dry" and you can only do that by making your cross in the square after the word "NO" on your ballot—the second square from the top on the right hand edge.

Arnett of Lexington, state organizer of the Young Men's Democratic clubs in Kentucky, spoke at the courthouse Wednesday night of last week and helped organize a club for Morgan county. O. B. AT THE POLLS

There's a time when every fellow stands and pauses at the door And counts his friends and comrades And names them o'er and o'er. He thinks of every favor That has been done for him By Tom and Dick and Harry, By Billy, Jack, and Jim.

He pauses for a moment, And then he whispers this: "Some have been my comrades, And some have done amiss, So before I vote I'll banish The thought of friend and foe, And stop and ask these questions: Which man is sure to know The interest of our country, The interest of our youth? Who'll dare to do his duty And dare to tell the truth? Which one will fight the battle For education's cause, And keep our schools in progress? When he solves at last the answers To these questions, he will say: "I'll step inside this open door And vote the proper way."

With a smile he'll take his ballot And step into the booth Where none but God can see him. He'll make his little crosses For the best men on the list, And go home feeling happy That no chances has he missed, To make his country better For the youth of our dear land Who today are getting ready To be tomorrow's men.

TALKS THRU HIS HAT

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 25.—Don Weaver, editor of the Kentucky Post, in a recent editorial takes Judge King Swope, Republican nominee for governor, to task for charging that A. B. "Happy" Chandler, Democratic nominee for governor, has failed to keep his promises.

In his editorial, Mr. Weaver cites numerous instances that "Happy" has kept faith with the people of Kentucky and fulfilled his pledges to them. His editorial, entitled "Mr. Swope Talks Thru His Hat," follows:

Judge King Swope, the Republican candidate for governor, is desperate for issues. When he first built his platform on opposition to the sales tax, government waste, and the bipartisan patronage machine, he expected to oppose Thomas S. Rhea, pet of the Laffoon administration, in November.

But with Lieutenant Governor A. B. Chandler as his opponent, he found himself with a platform almost like Chandler's, and Chandler had advocated it first and with more energy.

Now Swope has descended to ridiculous attempts to discredit Chandler. He charged that he, as presiding officer of the senate, hired more than the constitutional number of senate employees.

The constitution limits the legislative employees to a number too small to do the work of the senate and the house of representatives. So, to get the work done, more are hired and paid out of the salaries of the constitutional number. This has been done for years by Republicans and Democrats alike as a matter of common sense, and if Swope were elected his administration also would have to do it. To attempt to discredit Chandler for doing it is brazen demagoguery.

As a matter of fact the bipartisan Republican-Democratic combine in the senate which passed the sales tax and the bidding of Governor Laffoon stripped Chandler of his power and did not permit him to appoint senate employees.

If employees were appointed improperly, let Swope blame his own party and Governor Laffoon who now is lending him aid and comfort. Swope also was quoted as telling an audience in the mine fields that "You can put no dependence in what Chandler promises you he will do, because his record in all matters is strewn with broken promises."

Let Swope tell the people just what promises Chandler has broken. Has he ever broken his pledge to fight the sales tax? It is true he was unsuccessful in his fight against it, because Mr. Swope's Republican friends united with Governor Laffoon's Democrats to pass it. But Chandler never relaxed his fight against it, even in the face of defeat.

Did Chandler break his promise to the people to give them a primary? Even after the Republicans and the bipartisan Democrats had killed the primary law in the 1934 legislative sessions, Chandler restored the primary to the people by one of the boldest and most spectacular legislative strokes ever executed in Kentucky. He called a special session in the absence of Governor Laffoon and the primary law finally was passed.

Happy Chandler knows the people and what they want, and the people know him. We don't think Swope will get many votes by accusing Chandler of breaking promises.

SURPRISE SHOWER

Pastor and Mrs. Roscoe Brong invited a number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Fugett in Saturday evening and also managed to have the recent bride and groom present. Much to the surprise of the new married couple, the table was laden with many packages addressed to them. They enjoyed opening the gifts and found they had a whole set of dishes and other useful gifts. They were just too much overcome for words. The guests spent a pleasant social hour and were then served with hot chocolate and wafers.

Present were Mrs. Golden Nickell, Mary Jane Cox, Floris Cox, Mrs. A. P. Gullett, Mrs. Mona Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Haney and little daughter Jerry Lee, Mrs. L. B. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Brong, Mrs. F. S. Brong, Mrs. Edgar Wells and daughter Alma Joyce, Margaret Brong, Elizabeth Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Fugett, Carrie and Eunice Adams, Icie Davis, Sylvia Eggleston, Catharine Wells, and Lovel Brong.

THE OLD AGE PENSION

The congress of the United States passed an act providing for old age pensions; however, in this act there was a provision that each state would be asked to pay $15 and the federal government $85 before it becomes operative. Under the constitution as adopted in 1892, there may not be special legislation to favor any certain class as to benefits from the state government, so the general assembly of Kentucky has submitted an amendment to the constitution for the payment of the old age pension so that they can meet the federal government requirements. You will find this amendment on the right hand side of your ballot; in fact, there are two amendments to be voted on, one for the repeal of the state prohibition amendment and one for the old age pension.

Now unless the old age pension amendment is voted by the people of Kentucky on Nov. 5, 1935, the state will not be able to meet the requirements that are laid down by President Roosevelt's plan and the question could not be submitted to the people for at least two years; so let me urge you to vote for the old age pension amendment so that the old and needy and blind may be taken care of.

The main reason that I am supporting A. B. Chandler for governor is that I am convinced that with a Democratic governor we will be in much better shape to qualify for these benefits; as there is no doubt but what the Democrats will have a majority in the house and senate, and there would be better cooperation between a Democratic state administration and a Democratic national administration than could be possible with a Republican state administration no matter how sincere they were for the same legislation.

Respectfully submitted, LYNN B. WELLS, Attorney, West Liberty, Ky.

CONSIDER HIM

When next Tuesday's light is dawning And you journey on your way To do the daily duties Of that—another day— Will you pause and think a moment Of the polls, and what they mean To this town and to this county, And let nothing come between You and your sacred duty To the children of our land? Will you pause and think a moment Of that enterprising man Who is captain of the vessel Known to us as "Education"? Will you stop and think to render To him due consideration? Mr. Ova Haney—

Who has shown in every way That he understands the needs of our county schools today. The brief time he's been in office He has shown he has the grit To push our school work forward And make the best of it. When we needed a new building He stretched his helping hand To get money allocated By the F. E. R. A. plan. The work at once was started. The corner stone is laid. The money now to finish it Has at last been paid. The work on it will be resumed Within a day or two, And its completion will be rushed By Haney and his crew. Other buildings have been planned. And funds appropriated. School success this coming year Has been planned and slated. Teachers' salaries have increased. Our county's debt diminished. With Mr. Haney at the head, These buildings will be finished. So when next Tuesday's light has dawned, Be it bright or rainy, Why not vote for those two men Who'll stand by Mr. Haney, And help him carry out the plans That he will make and cherish To keep our schools in progress And make our county flourish? (Adv.) NANCY P. TURNER

Visited Friends Here

Manford Smith, a policeman on the force of the American Rolling Mills at Middletown, Ohio, and his son-in-law, McKinley Rudd, visited J. M. Rowland, Smith Elam, and other friends while on a business trip to their native county the early part of this week.

Walters

Miss Naudie J. Walters, born May 2, 1874, at Clay City, Powell county, died October 30, 1935, at West Liberty.

Miss Walters was the daughter of J. F. Walters Sr. and Lucinda Hampton, who were married in Clark county and went to housekeeping in Powell county. Her father was familiarly known as Uncle Jim Walters.

Miss Walters was the oldest daughter. She lost her parents in 1891 and 1902, then came to West Liberty to live with her sister Mollie. This has been her home for about 24 years. She lost a brother, J. F. Walters Jr., at Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 30, 1934—just one year before her death. Two brothers and four sisters survive: J. M. Walters, North Vernon, Indiana; H. B. Walters, Memphis, Tennessee; Mrs. Sallie Taylor, Lexington; Mrs. Cilda Lowry and Mrs. Daisy Ware, Dayton, Ohio; and Mrs. Mollie Lykins, West Liberty.

Last May Miss Walters accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Lykins to North Vernon, Indiana, to visit her brother, who is still very sick. Since this trip she has been in a serious condition with heart trouble. In June she called all her sisters, who came at once. She said she wanted to see them while she could enjoy their visit as she did not expect to live long. So much did she enjoy their visit that she rallied for a while, but it has been several weeks since she walked across the street to Mr. and Mrs. Lykins' office. She enjoyed company and enjoyed flowers. Sometimes she was discouraged, but she expressed herself as being ready and was most of the time cheerful and even jolly. She was with the family as usual yesterday. At bedtime she said goodnight and walked thru the dining room to the bath. They thought they heard someone fall. Mrs. Lykins ran and found her sister lying on her face as she had fallen when she opened the bathroom door. She had left them quickly but calmly.

Miss Walters became a member of the Arlington Christian church at Lexington at the age of eighteen, and still held her membership there. She was a very sweet Christian character, always kind and thoughtful of others. She was contented and happy in her home life. To know her was to love her. She had a host of friends who will not forget.

The funeral will be held at the Lykins home tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. Revs. Harlan Murphy, Roscoe Brong, and Clyde Boggs officiating. Interment will be in the Salyer cemetery, Patrick & Prater undertakers.

Veteran Actor Turns Railway Magnate

WILLIAM GILLETTE, the veteran actor, is here seen riding on the railway line he has built on his estate at Hadlyme, Conn. The locomotive was designed by him and uses gasoline for fuel. The tracks are three miles long. Mr. Gillette's hobby is to meet his guests at the "Grand Central station" of his railroad and run them into his estate.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT AND PADDY BECOME PARTNERS

THE instant Lightfoot the Deer saw Paddy the Beaver he knew that, for the time being at least, there was no danger. He knew that Paddy was one of the shyest of all the little people of the Green Forest and that when he is found working in the daytime it means that he has been undisturbed for a long time. Otherwise he would work only at night.

Paddy saw Lightfoot almost as soon as he stepped out on the bank. He kept right on swimming with the branch of a poplar tree until he reached his food pile, which, you know, is in the water. There he forced the branch down until it was held by other branches already sunken in the pond. This done, he swam over to where Lightfoot was watching. "Hello, Lightfoot!" he exclaimed. "You are looking handsomer than ever. How are you feeling these fine autumn days?"

"Anxious," replied Lightfoot. "I am feeling terribly anxious. Do you know what day this is?"

"No," replied Paddy. "I don't know what day it is and I don't particularly care. It is enough for me that it is one of the finest days we've had for a long time."

"I wish I could feel that way," said Lightfoot wistfully. "I wish I could feel that way, Paddy, but I can't. No, sir, I can't. You see, this is the first of the most dreadful days in all the year for me. The hunters started looking for me before Mr. Sun was really out of bed. At least one hunter did and I don't doubt there are others. I fooled that one, but from now to the end of the hunting season there will not be a single moment of daylight when I will feel absolutely safe."

Paddy crept out on the bank and chewed a little twig of poplar thoughtfully. Paddy says he can always think better if he is chewing something. "That's bad news, Lightfoot. I'm sorry to hear it, I certainly am sorry to hear it," said Paddy. "Why anybody wants to hunt such a handsome fellow as you are I cannot understand. My, but that's a beautiful head of horns you have!"

"They are the best I've ever had, but do you know, Paddy, I suspect that they may be one of the reasons I am hunted so," replied Lightfoot, a little sadly. "Good looks are not always to be desired. Have you seen any hunters around here lately?"

Paddy shook his head. "Not a single hunter," he replied. "I tell you what it is, Lightfoot, let's be partners for a while. You stay right around my pond. If I see or hear or smell anything suspicious I'll warn you. You do the same for me. Two sets of eyes, ears and noses are better than one. What do you say, Lightfoot?"

"I'll do it," replied Lightfoot. © T. W. Burgess.—WNU Service.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Would you be kind enough to settle an argument between my wife and me? I say a person with great talent and a genius are one and the same thing, while my wife says there is a vast difference between the two. Who is right, and why?

Yours truly, WRIGHT INGPAD.

Answer: Your wife is right. The difference between talent and genius is that talent gets paid every Saturday.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I bought a horse yesterday at a sale, and drove him home. He kept stopping every few minutes. Today I took him out again and he did the same thing. What do you think is wrong with him?

Sincerely, KEN TUCKKIE.

Answer: He is probably deaf and is afraid he won't hear you say whoa, so he just stops to listen.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Can you tell me what is meant by a crazy bone?

Truly yours, U. MER.

Answer: A crazy bone is a dollar spent foolishly.

Dear Mr. Wynn: This morning I tried to see how long I could stand on my head. After three minutes I had to give up because the blood rushed to my head. When I stand on my feet how is it the blood doesn't rush there?

Yours truly, CON. TORTIONISTT.

Answer: Your feet are not empty.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am an artist. I entered a contest but my painting did not get a prize. The men who judged the paintings were not artists. Do you think it possible for men to tell a good or bad painting when they can't paint one themselves.

Truly yours, CHAS. KALE.

Answer: Sure, they can. I can tell a bad egg and I never laid one.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Every time I take a railroad trip I have an argument with the train conductor about sticking my head out of the window. I am an American citizen and I always pay for my ticket, and I object to this kind of treatment. I have a right to put my head out the train window, haven't I?

Sincerely, ANN. R. KIST.

Answer: Of course you have a perfect right to put your head out of the train window. The only reason the conductors say anything to you about it is that they want you to realize that in case the train passes over a bridge and your head is sticking out and your head damages any of the iron-work on the bridge you'll have to pay for it. © Associated Newspapers.—WNU Service.

MOTHER'S
COOK BOOK

A FEW DESSERTS

A MEAL is unfinished without something in sweets or a made dessert to end the meal.

Adam's Cream Pie.

Scald one cupful of milk, add one cupful of sugar and one-eighth teaspoonful of salt. Mix two teaspoonfuls of corn starch with a little cold milk; add to the scalded milk, stirring constantly. Cook until smooth; then pour on two well-beaten eggs mixed with a cupful of cream; pour into a pastry lined tin and sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake until firm in the center. Remove at once from the oven and serve cold.

Steamed Cherry Pudding.

Drain canned cherries from the syrup. Make a batter of one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and milk to mix into a drop batter. Butter pudding cups and add a tablespoonful of the mixture, then a table-spoonful of the cherries—a bit of juice with them will not matter. Cover with another spoonful of batter, leaving plenty of room in the cup for rising. Set the cups into hot water, cover closely and boil fifteen minutes. Use the juice lightly thickened for the sauce, adding a little butter.

Orange Rounds.

Cut rounds from rich pastry and bake. Put together with orange filling prepared as follows: Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add five tablespoonfuls of sugar, the juice of one orange and half of the grated rind. Beat in the yolks of three eggs, stirring constantly, add two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped or grated candied orange peel and two tablespoonfuls of chopped candied pineapple, stir and cook until the filling is thick enough to spread. Use as filling for two rounds of the pastry. © Western Newspaper Union.

Equine Giants Win Championship

THERE are giants, still—these days—in the horse world—great one-ton giants that still bear burdens for us, just as man's oldest, most useful friend has always done. And a new world's heavyweight championship record was made in the work horse world, at Hillsdale County fair, Michigan, recently when two giants, Rock and Tom, trained by Russell Sando of Piqua, Ohio, defeated the giant champions of the East and hauled a load of 25 1/2 tons for 20 consecutive starts. A "dynamometer," operated by Michigan State college, was used to measure the pulls scientifically. Expert horsemen and engineers were all amazed at this record. Rock and Tom are here shown doing their stunt.

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 25:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness ex-alteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Black Man God Cared For.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In Time of Danger,
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—Results of Doing Wrong.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT
TOPIC—Nations Accountable to God.

I. The Siege of Jerusalem (vv. 1-3).

1. The time (vv. 1, 2). It began on the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign, lasting about eighteen months. The month, according to the Jew's calendar, corresponds to our December-January, as their calendar began about the middle of March. The reason the exact time is given is that this was to be an event of great importance to the Jews in their exile. In their gloomy exile God directed Ezekiel to utter a parable unto the captives of that day (Ezek. 24).

2. The method (v. 11). Nebuchadnezzar came in person with a large army and encamped against Jerusalem, building forts against it round about. It is thought that several walls were built around the city, shutting it in. On the tops of these walls forts were built from which missiles of destruction could be hurled by their engines of war against the city. With the city thus shut in, its fall was only a question of time.

3. The famine (v. 3). Goliath says, "It was speedily followed, as is always the case, with an outbreak of pestilence. Food was well-nigh gone. There had long been no bread. Mothers were at last driven to murder and eat their children. The richest citizens wandered about searching for scraps in the dung hills." Even outside the city the people were starving. "There was no bread for the people of the land." It is estimated that one-third of the people of Jerusalem died of starvation.

II. Zedekiah's Flight and Fate (vv. 4-7).

1. "The city was broken up" (v. 4). The Chaldeans had succeeded in making an opening in the wall so large that they could make their way into the city in spite of all that the Hebrews could do. Resistance was carried on to the bitter end.

2. Zedekiah's flight (v. 4). The king with his men of war fled by night toward the plain. His object no doubt was to cross the Jordan at Jericho and hide in the mountains east of the Jordan.

3. Zedekiah's fate (vv. 5-7).

a. He was overtaken in the plains of Jericho (v. 5). As soon as the Chaldean army discovered the flight they pursued and captured him.

b. He was brought to the king of Babylon at Riblah (v. 6). Riblah was a town north of Damascus. It was the king's headquarters from which he directed his armies against Tyre and Jerusalem. Before Nebuchadnezzar Zedekiah was tried as a criminal.

c. His fate. His sons were slain in his sight. His own eyes were put out. He was bound with fetters of brass and they carried him to Babylon where he remained a prisoner to the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

III. Jerusalem Destroyed (vv. 8-10).

The dismantling of the city was delayed a month, perhaps awaiting instructions from Nebuchadnezzar who was at Riblah. The work of destruction was executed by the officer next in rank to the king.

1. They burnt the house of the Lord (v. 9). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon, with additions and alterations. Before burning it, they plundered it of all its sacred contents.

2. Burnt the king's house (v. 9). This was doubtless the palace built by Solomon.

3. Burnt all the houses of Jerusalem (v. 9). The implication is that the common houses were left for the people (v. 12).

4. They broke down the walls of Jerusalem. The aim in this was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.

IV. The Disposition of the Temple Furniture and Priests (vv. 13-21).

1. The temple furniture carried to Babylon (vv. 13-17). The pillars of brass and the brazen sea were broken into pieces by the Babylonians and together with the utensils were carried to Babylon.

2. Certain officers and priests taken to Riblah (vv. 18-21). These officers and priests and three score men of the land were taken to Riblah, where they were slain by the king of Babylon. The events recorded in Second Kings cover a period of 308 years. God had said, "If thou wilt, then I will"; they had invited disaster by disobedience.

Experience

In youth we learn how little we can do for ourselves, in age how little we can do for others. The wisdom of experience is incommunicable.

Nature's Ice Box O. K.; Keeps Food 33 Years

Nature's ice box has even the best of mechanical refrigerators skinned when it comes to food preservation. Keeping food in good condition for years is no trick at all for natural cold storage plants such as the Antarctic wastes. According to Dr. Dana Coman, physician and dietitian for the Lincoln Ellsworth-Sir Hubert Wilkins expedition, food left in a shack in the South Polar region 33 years ago was found to be still edible when discovered. The long preserved food supplies were left by a Norwegian explorer, Otto Nordenskjöld, in 1902.—Washington Post.

It is astonishing how some neglected children thrive.

SOME INDIANS CANNIBALS

Proof that cannibalism was practiced among American Indians is claimed by Lloyd A. Wilford, anthropologist of the University of Minnesota. An Indian burial mound at Laurel produced skeletons with arm, leg and skull bones crushed to permit drainage of bone marrow, which was used, he believes, either for food or tanning purposes.

"My baking gets more bouquets—and I save, too!"

SAYS MRS. C. H. McINTOSH, 854 EASTWOOD AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILL.

Lowest Prices Ever on Calumet Baking Powder!

"It's certainly good news that Calumet is selling at new low prices," Mrs. McIntosh says. "I do a lot of baking, and when I can get a full pound can of reliable Calumet for only 25c, I'm pretty pleased with myself!"

Her son Jack settles down to some of Mother's famous coffee cake, and pays for it with a big smile.

AND LOOK AT THE NEW CAN! A simple twist...and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHY IS CALUMET DIFFERENT from other baking powders? Why do you have to use only one level teaspoonful of Calumet to a cup of sifted flour in most recipes? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat.

New! Big 10¢ Can!...

Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder, is now selling at the lowest prices ever...The new-size can is yours for a dime! And the regular price of the Full-Pound Can is only 25c! A product of General Foods.

County Board of Education of Morgan county subject to the will of the voters at the regular election Nov. 5, 1935.

FARMERS' COLUMN

Inspection of chimneys is important, as the fires are started for the winter. This should be done as a precaution against the possibility of the roof or other part of the house catching fire, and also to make the grate, stove, or furnace more efficient.

Neglecting the mules or work horses during the winter is not good business, even if it does save a little feed. They should not be made over fat but should be kept in good thrifty condition through the cold months.

Where hay is the only roughage fed, a Jersey cow requires about 600 pounds and a Holstein about 900 pounds a month. If silage is fed at the usual rate, which is 3 pounds a day per 100 pounds of live weight, the amount of hay needed is considerably less.

Skim milk or buttermilk, where available in sufficient quantities, may be used to balance the grain ration for chickens. Twenty-five to thirty layers will consume a gallon a day where no other animal protein is fed. Garments that are not worn frequently, or that are put away for the season, may be protected by garment bags. A bag may be made for a single garment or for several and may open at the top, bottom, center, or side. It should be large enough so dresses or coats will not be wrinkled.

There is still time to sow rye as a garden cover crop. Heavy manuring, followed by plowing or disking, would materially increase the fertility of many gardens. Manuring, however, often brings more weeds.

Earnings of farmers varied from a low of $470 to the top figure of $2,800 in Washington county, their farm record books reveal. Average crop returns on farms given business analyses were: tobacco, $900; dairy cattle, $400; sheep, $200; hogs, $230; and beef cattle, $408.

Farm Building Plans

The agricultural engineering department at the agricultural experiment station at Lexington reports an increase in the number of requests for farm building plans. Ninety sets of plans were sent out, upon request, last month. They included plans for tobacco barns and stripping rooms, farm houses, poultry houses and equipment, smoke houses, hog barns, self-feeders, dairy barns, and general barns. The station has 300 kinds of farm building plans for distribution.

Poultry Expert Visits Kentucky

S. J. Marsden of the U. S. department of agriculture praised Kentucky poultry raising methods in a recent visit to this state. Methods used by R. E. Nute, Valley Station, in raising 5,000 turkeys were pronounced most practical and economical, and the agricultural experiment station at Lexington was commended for its turkey brooding equipment and poultry plant. Mr. Marsden has been in charge of the government turkey range at Miles City, Montana, and is a poultry authority.

For Better Bluegrass

Bourbon county farmers are observing that better bluegrass crops follow the growing of legumes seeded after the use of limestone, notes County Agent P. R. Watlington. There is a big demand for limestone and more will be used this year than in any year since 1929. Likewise the acreages of alfalfa, clovers, and other legumes are increasing.

Democratic Party Presents Program for Commonwealth's Advancement

PROMISES AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The Democratic and Republican platforms are so nearly similar on a number of major points that Lieutenant Governor Chandler has charged that Judge Swope "swiped" his platform. Mr. Chandler enunciated his platform in the primary. Promises, however, are valuable only if they are fulfilled. There will certainly be a Democratic majority in both Houses of the General Assembly in Frankfort. Mr. Chandler will have a complete Democratic Administration and is not tied up with any promises to return to bi-partisanship. He, therefore, can accomplish his program while Judge Swope would not be able to accomplish anything in Frankfort.

END UNCERTAINTY

The defeat of Mr. Chandler for Governor would introduce an era of uncertainty which causes distress to business and handicaps all progressive activity in the Commonwealth. Split responsibility in the era of Sampsonism or bi-partisanship resulted in job bartering in the Legislature, ripper bills, forcible ousters, many suits testing the Governor's acts and authority, and a general deadlock preventing constructive action.

A POPULAR TICKET

Mr. Chandler and his associates on the Democratic ticket were nominated by the people in a Democratic primary. They are known thruout the state. Mr. Chandler and the nominee for Lieutenant Governor, usually referred to as the banner bearer's running mate, are familiarly known as "Happy and Keen." All nominees are able and well known Kentuckians and their election will result from a popular outpouring of public sentiment which will inspire them and enable them to render better public service.

PRIMARY ELECTIONS

The Democratic party complied with the compulsory primary law enacted by the General Assembly of Kentucky. The Republican party as the result of the efforts of national fixers trying to undermine President Roosevelt called a convention and made "recommendations." This nullified the primary election law.

REPEAL THE SALES TAX

Mr. Chandler has fought the sales tax from the time it first was proposed in the Legislature. He stands now against its re-enactment or continuation.

SUPPORT THE PRESIDENT

President Franklin D. Roosevelt is looking to Kentucky to endorse his program. The eyes of the nation are turned toward this state and the defeat of Mr. Chandler would be interpreted nationally as a repudiation of Roosevelt just when recovery is well under way.

SAVE BY ECONOMY

Mr. Chandler has estimated that millions can be saved by economy and thru reorganization of the state government along the lines suggested by auditors who studied the state's administrative structure. Property owners, taxpayers, and all interested in business of any kind will be assisted by such an economical government as he will give.

SUPPORT FOR SCHOOLS

Mr. Chandler is in favor of a $12 per capita for the schools of Kentucky. He is pledged to free textbooks for the public school children. He advocates reasonable salaries for teachers and elimination of politics from the schools. On the ticket with him is Harry W. Peters, for Superintendent of Public Instruction, one of the outstanding educators of Kentucky.

FRIEND OF FARMER

Farmers are supporting the Democratic ticket because of their interest in seeing the Roosevelt program for keeping up prices of farm products continued. They also feel that in Senator Garth K. Ferguson, who has done so much to make the state fair a great institution, they have a true friend in the candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture.

CHAMPION OF LABOR

The Kentucky State Federation of Labor endorsed Mr. Chandler at its state convention in Frankfort. The four railroad brotherhoods have endorsed his candidacy. United Mine Workers of America are supporting him. John L. Lewis, outstanding national labor leader, visited Kentucky in his behalf.

Italian Goods Boycotted by the League

WHILE Premier Pierre Laval of France was still trying desperately to find a way of settling the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel that would be acceptable to both Great Britain and Italy—apparently without regard to Ethiopia's real interests—fifty-two members of the League of Nations declared a boycott on all Italian goods and an embargo on various key exports to that country. The boycott binds these nations to prohibit importation of "all goods consigned from and grown, produced or manufactured in Italy or in Italian possessions from whatever place they arrive."

If rigidly enforced, this would cut off about two-thirds of the export trade upon which Italy depends in getting funds for prosecution of the war in Africa. The countries applying the sanctions agree to aid one another in compensating losses by increased trade facilities, credits, cash and loans if possible, and discriminating against league members such as Austria and Hungary which continue to trade with Italy.

Austria, Hungary and Albania spoke against the sanctions. Switzerland, which seeks to preserve her traditional neutrality, was silent. Some South American republics made complicated reservations.

It was decided that the sanctions should be put in force on October 31, and Laval thus had time to continue his peace efforts. These seemed to center on a way to "legalize" Italian occupation of that part of northern Ethiopia which Mussolini's troops have seized and to arrange for Italy's partial control over the entire empire.

European Tension Lessened by Diplomatic Juggling

IN THE course of his negotiations, which were given approval in the French elections, Laval worked hard to dissipate the threat of hostilities between Great Britain and Italy. In this he apparently was fairly successful, at least for the time being. He asked the British to withdraw some of their battleships from the Mediterranean and Mussolini to call back a lot of the troops he had sent to Libya as a threat to Egypt. At first the British cabinet rejected this proposition, but there were reports that it might yield the point.

Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, informed the Italian government that Britain would not undertake any action in regard to the conflict in Ethiopia, "beyond what is demanded by its collective obligations in its quality as a loyal member of the League of Nations, nor beyond what might be agreed to or recommended by the league on conformity with the dispositions of the pact."

Laval's reply to Great Britain's query as to whether France would support Britain and co-operate with her fleet in the Mediterranean in case of Italian attacks was still somewhat uncertain but seemed to satisfy the British.

Italian aviator-scouts reported that Ethiopian troops were digging in at Makale, about 90 miles southeast of Addis Ababa, and the next logical objective in the Italian campaign of occupation, forming a major concentration for a desperate effort to frustrate the next attack.

From Dessie, Ethiopia, came a story that Danakil warriors had cut off and surrounded between 500 and 700 Italians in the hills southeast of Mount Mussa Ali, and that the latter were very short of food and water.

Helena, Mont., Hit by Series of Quakes

HELENA, capital of Montana, and all the western part of that state were terrified by a series of earthquake shocks extending through a number of days. There were only two fatalities, but numerous buildings were wrecked or so weakened that they had to be razed. Hundreds of persons were driven from their homes, and the suffering was intensified by a sudden fall of the temperature to below freezing. Fortunately the gas mains of the city were not broken. National Guardsmen patrolled the business district and all public places were closed for days. Senator William E. Murray and Representative John P. Monaghan surveyed the damage, and Murray, terming the quake "one of Montana's worst disasters," said he would go by airplane to Washington ask immediate help.

Arthur Henderson, Peace Advocate, Is Dead

ARTHUR HENDERSON, president of the world disarmament conference and a most determined foe of war, died in a London nursing home. He was seventy-two years old and had been ill for a long time, so ill that he had not been permitted to see a newspaper for six weeks and did not know that another war had broken out and that the peace of Europe was threatened.

The former iron molder of Glasgow who became a leader of the Labor party and was foreign secretary when it was in power, was awarded the Nobel peace prize in 1934. His crusade for peace and disarmament was inspired by the death of his eldest son in the World war. He was a gentle, much loved man, a genuine idealist whose later years were made sorrowful by the repeated failure of the disarmament conference to get results.

Death of General Greely, Arctic Explorer

DEATH came to an eminent American, Maj. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, U. S. A., retired, at the age of ninety-one years. He passed away in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, and was buried in Arlington national cemetery with full honors. General Greely was universally known as the leader of the ill-fated expedition into the Arctic regions in 1881 from which only he and seven others returned alive. But he had already served in the Civil war with distinction, and his later scientific accomplishments won him international fame and recognition. On his ninety-first birthday, last March 27, he received a medal of honor from congress "for his life of splendid service."

General Greely was one of the original organizers of the National Geographic society, and a member of the board of trustees continuously for 47 years from the date of the society's founding in 1888.

Williams Asks Care for "Unemployables"

ALL states and communities have been asked by Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator, to make better provisions for the care of "unemployables," for federal aid for the needy will soon be confined to providing jobs. In an interview Mr. Williams said that with six states already cut off the dole, progress of the work relief program would bring liquidation of relief administrations in "the great majority of the remaining states" during November. This will leave those physically or mentally unable to work, the aged, mothers with dependent children, and other handicapped families and individuals, dependent upon local efforts.

"It will be next year before the social security program becomes operative, and the states have got to take the responsibility," he said.

President Roosevelt's order that all employment projects be under way or ready for contractors' bids by October 22 could not be complied with by any agency except the WPA with its $133,000,000 slum clearance and low cost housing program. The next deadline is December 15, when Mr. Roosevelt said all heavy construction—public works $230,000,000 of work, river and harbor improvements and rural electrification systems—should be under contract.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Tragedy in the News.
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—

To me, the biggest, most tragic story in the week's papers was not a war in Africa, or a Mexican border raid, or the passing of a gallant American soldier. It was a little press dispatch from an Ohio town where a twelve-year-old boy lived.

The family was on relief, the father out of work. There was no food in the house, no pennies to buy any food with. The little chap owned a rabbit, the parents voted that the rabbit must go in the pot to put strength into the stomachs of the hungry brood. Their son was hungry, too. But his rabbit was his pet, his one possession. So he went and he hanged himself with a loop of frayed clothes-line.

People, including some who have plenty of it for themselves, are given to saying money isn't everything. Maybe not, but it'll buy quite a lot of things. Just a little money in that poor household would have bought a boy's life. And a boy, who so dearly loved a dumb and helpless thing that he died rather than see it die, might have grown up to be somebody in a world which needs all the compassion and all the loving it can get.

The Lion and the Lamb.

NO MATTER who gets involved in it or how this Ethiopian war turns out, watch motherly old Britain emerge from the mess with something valuable—territories, concessions, mandates or what have you—tucked away in her commodious bread baskets. Any time the lion and the lamb lie down together, the lamb stays down—provided it's the British lion you're thinking of.

Let those who will, fight the battles and foot the bills. All John Bull asks is a chance to exercise the benevolent process of absorption, digestion and assimilation. There's one appetite has stood the test of the ages.

For the valor of her sons, perhaps it's fitting that, as a symbol, England should have Leo, but if you're picking something to typify her policies, my choice would be the tapeworm.

Today's Stein Song.

THINGS never come out right in this faulty world. Just as Professor Einstein, the scientist, arrives with a large crate of fresh relativity, Gertrude Stein, the poet, goes hence. For years I have been waiting to see these two massive minds brought under the same bulging roof, hoping then they'd take on a job which lesser intellects could never cope with. I wanted her to explain his theory and I wanted him to explain her poetry.

I even had the welcoming chorus fixed up: For it's always fair weather, when good mysteries get together, with Einstein on the table and a Gertrude ringing clear!

What This Country Needs.

A LADY writes in, wishing to know what this country needs the most.

Well, dear madam, let's see: Would it be more citizens who'll quit cussing the kind of government they get, for long enough to go to the polls, just once, and vote? Or more patriots who'll quit wailing Old Glory long enough to help smoke out some alien enemy hiding in the folds of the flag he hates?

Or fewer of those anti-Rooseveltites who still think any honest criticism of the man in the White House is just the same as breaking the second commandment?

But, lady, since you're asking me, I say what this country needs most is a Mae West joke to end all Mae West jokes.

The Hunting Season.

WITH the open season impending, certain sportsmen again are declaring that, because our hunters should have more ducks and geese to shoot at, the government ought to stop the Alaskan natives from eating the eggs of wildfowl. But isn't it sort of true that those benighted Eskimos rob the nests because they're hungry for food—any food?

I've shot all over this country and Canada—hope to keep on doing so, too—but I've yet to run across the hunter, professional or amateur, who was there shooting because his family might starve to death if he didn't bring home some ducks. Still, why worry about a lot of Yukon Indians? They don't vote, don't even buy anything on the installment plan.

For one, I'm not against reducing the bag-limit again this fall. In former years, when I got back without any game, I had to think up 25 separate alibis, whereas now I need only 10 such. That, naturally, reduces the mental strain. If I kill a duck on the wing, it's a profound shock to both parties concerned—neither one of us expecting that to happen.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Practical Jim Farley will have more to do with President Roosevelt's re-election—if he is re-elected—than all the New Deal brain trusters put together, or than many of the issues which in the last few months have attracted so much attention.

Farley has really built up a national organization. It ramifies down not only to every county, but to every precinct in the 48 states, and it is busy all the time. It has been working like mad in directions that have attracted no attention whatever. For example, it has been conducting a drive lately to get every Democrat, man or woman, who happens to be on the federal pay roll in Washington but charged to New York state, to register. It has run special excursion trains to New York with reduced fares, meal prices, etc., to bring about this registration.

This is a sample of the kind of activity which makes organization or machines (the choice of words depending on whether you are for them or against them) strong. It is the kind of thing that explains, in large part, why Tammany normally elects mayors in New York despite the black eye the tiger has in most of the country.

It is the reason the Republican organization generally won in Philadelphia, the Democratic in Baltimore, etc.

Much better illustrations are Chicago and St. Louis. The point here being that these two big Middle Western towns have had periods during the last twenty years when the strong organization was with one party, and then the other party developed a better. Thus proving that it is not the moral political inclination of the voters in these big cities which is so important, but the fact that the machine gets the vote registered, and then gets it voted on election day. Not to mention seeing that it is counted—at least once—after the polls are closed.

Started in Early

Farley began his real activities following the election of Roosevelt as governor of New York in 1930. His Tammany background was shocked at the state of the party above the Bronx. There were whole counties where the local Democratic organization was a mere adjunct to the local G. O. P. boss, and received patronage scraps from the local G. O. P. table in reward.

Farley installed a real fighting organization, with workers in every upstate precinct. That explained Roosevelt's enormous majority in 1930 which made him the logical Presidential nominee. With the opening of the 1932 campaign, Farley started the same sort of organization work for the whole country. He has been at it ever since. The 1934 election, far more sweeping than even the Roosevelt landslide of 1932, was not generally recognized as the fruit of this organization work, but actually it was most potent in bringing it about.

Today the organization that Farley has built up is stronger than in 1934. Whereas the Republican national organization, and the local organization in many doubtful states, is infinitely weaker than at any time since the end of the Civil war.

This is the very little discussed handicap that the Republican nominee, to oppose Roosevelt next year will face. For instance, Illinois is admitted by many observers to be apt to go Democratic. Why? Because of the strength of the Kelley machine in Chicago, plus the Farley inspired organization downstate. Were the old Thompson machine in existence in the Windy City, the state would be figured probably Republican.

In Missouri the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, plus the decay of the old "Big Four" Republican machine in St. Louis, makes all the difference in its votes in the ballot box, not sentiment 'round the radio, that elects. And machines know how to get them in the boxes.

Back to Prohibition

Most people may laugh at the predictions of dry leaders that this country is headed back toward prohibition—but not the distillers. Behind this attitude of fear is a very curious situation, very obvious to any one inquiring into it, but not generally realized. It involves the possibility that in the next fight for prohibition, for the fight is not only coming but has begun, the effort will be to prohibit not any beverage in excess of one-half of 1 per cent, as the Volstead law read nor even of "intoxicating beverages" as the Eighteenth amendment read—but distilled liquor.

Distillers are keenly aware of that. This explains their caution, as contrasted with the attitude of the brewers and wine makers. There was a great deal of talk, just before prohibition, about "light wines and beer."

All of which is curious in view of the tremendous prejudice which existed in that long period leading up to prohibition against the word "beer." It was generally coupled with an even more objectionable word "saloon." In fact, one frequently heard the words jointly—"beer saloon."

That prejudice seems to have faded until little is left of it. When war time prohibition was being discussed in the senate, Wadsworth of New York, painted a delightful picture of the joys and temperateness of wine drinking. Senator Norris, one of the dryest of the drys, rose and asked if the senator from New York would be satisfied if the bill exempted wine. Wadsworth said he would like to save beer, too. Norris and other drys threw up their hands. It was unthinkable. It may be that this original prejudice, so much stronger against beer than wine, though wine contained normally a much larger percentage of alcohol, grew out of the difficulty some religious drys had in surmounting the Feast of Cana, but whatever the truth, the fact will be recalled by anyone in this country at the time that beer was far more obnoxious to the drys than wine.

Wine "Hard Liquor"

But now state after state, including Virginia, home state of Bishop Cannon, makes the sale of beer and wine simple, but throws many restrictions around the sale of "hard liquor." In a way the plan follows that practiced for a long time in Canada. So-called "wine cocktails" are offered in hotel dining rooms, but not martinis or manhattans. Beer is sold everywhere.

Beer and wine are sold in Virginia, Washington, and many other places in this country much more freely than in the old pre-prohibition days. Before prohibition the only places that would sell a customer a glass or bottle of beer were licensed saloons, which were strictly limited as to number. Now there are frequently five in one block. In Washington these are sandwiched between stores which are licensed to sell only packaged goods not to be consumed on the premises.

All of which change in sentiment—if it really does represent a change—is very apparent to the distillers, and their thought is that if the fight is concentrated on distilled liquor, or say beverages exceeding 15 per cent or 20 per cent alcoholic content, they will not have the brewers, the wine makers and the grape growers with them.

Postal Savings

While there is no intention in the administration of yielding to the clamor of privately owned banks for the postal savings system, there is just as much opposition in official quarters to the elaborate plans for expanding that system, including checking accounts, and going into a general banking business.

Officials, both of the reserve board and post office, insist that they do not want to change the present system at all. They do not want to push privately owned and mutual savings banks out of business, and they do not want the government going into the banking business on a large scale. But at the same time they are unwilling to deprive the public of what they regard as a "privilege."

Actually it is rather puzzling that the postal savings system has not made greater inroads on savings banks in many communities, for example, the cities of New York state. In the Empire state the state banking authorities do not permit savings accounts to draw more than 2 per cent, which is precisely the rate paid by postal deposits.

But—postal savings depositors in many instances are buying postal savings bonds, and these pay 2½ per cent—more than they can get from any savings account in a privately owned or mutual bank in New York state.

As a matter of fact, the amount of such bonds so far bought, $101,977,500, represents just about the increase in postal deposits since last December, when postal deposits reached their peak of $1,208,000,000. They are now about $4,000,000 less than the peak, but would be nearly $100,000,000 above it, post office officials think, were it not for the savings bonds.

Money Is Safe

With the government guaranteeing all bank deposits, they point out, there is no question, so far as well informed people are concerned, of the safety of their money. So if the private banks pay a higher rate than the postal savings, the private banks should attract savings deposits as never before since postal savings was inaugurated.

Postal savings had the big boom, very naturally, in 1933, the year of the bank holiday. In December of that year they crossed $1,000,000,000. By the time confidence had been restored, and the government guarantee of deposits set up, the banks had begun to cut their interest rates. So there was no incentive to take the money out of postal savings and put it back in the banks. In most large cities of this country this is still true.

Where there are legal restrictions on the amount of interest that can be paid, as in New York state, it is just a question of protecting the banks from getting more deposits than they can profitably and safely invest, considering the low rate of interest paid on government bonds and other investments into which banks can put their funds. With the improvement of business, the state banking authorities could change this limitation overnight.

Here is a good way to clean brown leather: Warm a little milk. Add a little washing soda to it, and let it dissolve. Apply this solution to the stain. Work from the outside of each stain toward the center, using a soft cloth and rubbing very gently. Several applications may have to be made on a stubborn stain. THE HOUSEWIFE.

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth.

The plane nosed down so steeply that the pontoons went under. Fortunately the craft was almost fool-proof. She bobbed up without plunging to the bottom. Huxby taxied shoreward against the current from the stream and the thrust of the down-gulch breeze.

Garth stood up to pilot the pilot. A clump of spruces stood a few yards in from the water-smoothed ledge on the right bank of the stream mouth. Huxby obeyed the signal to shut off the motor. As the propeller ceased to spin the plane glided in between the banks of the outflowing stream.

Uncoupling the line as he went, Garth ran out on the right wing. From the overhang he leaped down on the shelf ledge and bounded along it to the nearest spruce. The plane had already lost its headway and was starting to drift backwards in the swift outflow of the stream.

The line tautened as Garth whipped it around the tree trunk. To make doubly safe, he used the last foot for a pair of half hitches. He knew what would happen if the plane should drift free with no pilot aboard.

Snubbed fast, the monoplane swung to the near bank and lay with the right-hand float snug against the polished waterline of the ledge. Huxby came out on the wing and jumped off to peer down the glassy slope of rock at the pontoon.

"Not so bad," he admitted. "I had the place picked out." Garth replied. "The rock is very slick. There'll be no need of fenders during our few hours' stay."

The engineer pilot shoved his goggles up on the front of his helmet. "How's that? 'Picked out,' you say. Been around airplanes, have you?"

"I know how rough stone will chafe a boat," Garth replied. "Your floats are a kind of canoe. Can you get Mr. Ramill and his daughter ashore by way of the wing?"

Miss Ramill called from the cabin: "Why didn't you pick a decent landing place, Vivian? We never can get ashore up this smooth sloping rock. The steps are no use. You'll have to make a gangway for Dad and me."

Garth vaulted upon the wing and walked in along it to the fuselage. The girl leaned from the big rear window of the cabin. "Give me your hand," Garth said. "I'll swing you up on the wing."

He knelt above her on the cabin roof and reached down. Her lips curled in a contemptuous smile. "If that's the best you can do, I'll stay right here. I've no wish to go bathing."

"In that case, get out of the way. Your father wishes to see my prospect. I'll not waste time building a needless gangway."

She was the heiress to millions and had been reared in prodigious luxury. Never had she been treated so cavalierly as by this buckskin-clad prospector. She turned to her fiancé.

"Vivian, you heard the insolent fellow!"

Huxby grasped the wing tip to pull himself up. The girl's father spoke over her shoulder: "Stay where you are, Vivian. We're here to look at Garth's mine. He has agreed to help Lilith and me ashore. If he prefers to remain aboard, she may do so."

The girl looked both surprised and angered. She drew back into the cabin. Her father thrust out his head from the window to look up at Garth. "Won't it be more than you can manage? I weigh over two hundred."

For reply, Garth reached down. The portly millionaire hung in Garth's grasp almost like a dead weight. Yet Garth swung him bodily up and around on the wing.

He led the limping gentleman out to the far end, near the tip, and lowered him down upon the top of the ledge. Before he could follow, Miss Ramill called out to him: "Come back for me. It should be safe enough. You did not drop Dad."

Garth looked up the gulch, smiled, and went to swing the girl out of the window. Up on the wing she clutched his shoulder as if to steady herself. Her scarlet-smoked lips curved in a patronizing smile.

"You're wonderfully strong!" "More knacker than muscle." "Both! It was simply marvelous how you lifted Dad without losing your balance."

Out near the wing tip Garth drew his arm free from her clasp, caught her by the elbows, and lowered her into Huxby's upthrust hands. She looked up and smiled. "So nice of you, old dear. Now, if you'll fetch a cup, I'm dying to try a drink of this delightful-looking milky water." "The dying would be more apt to follow your drink," Garth replied. He sprang down beside her father. "Your drink is rock-dust ground off by the glacier. It's apt to be a dangerous drink. There's clear water where we're going."

He caught up his rifle, and set off against the easy upslope from the lake shore. The others followed after him, picking their way between the scraggy branches of the spruce trees. Before long the trees dwarfed down into timberline scrub.

"What an odd-colored stone!" The girl turned to stare resentfully at the desolate grandeur of the mountains across the valley. "Did you ever see such a horrible place? It's almost as bad as those ash-heaps mountains in the Mohave desert. Come along, Dad. Don't keep us here forever. This raw hole makes me sick."

Her father spoke irritably: "You wouldn't listen when I advised you to remain at Edmonton. Why didn't you stay in the cabin, instead of following me ashore?"

"Oh, tune off," she complained. "It's quite enough to've dragged myself out on this God-forsaken dirt pile. Even the berries are sour. I'm going back. There ought to be a dance program on somewhere. Only thing can Vivian get me up into the cabin?"

He looked expectantly at Garth. The smile she gave him jerked the attention of her fiancé away from the purpose that had brought them ashore.

"I'll swing you aboard easy enough, Lilith," he said.

Garth spoke to him without a trace of amusement: "If you ask me, I think this little walk to the mine would be good exercise for Miss Ramill. When I left here, last month, there was a she-grizzly with two cubs back along the lake shore. They may have gone off; maybe not. That pistol of yours wouldn't be of much use if you happened to blunder between the old lady and her young ones."

"You saw the beast, yet did not kill her," scoffed Huxby. "Pretty thin?" "Not at all; she was quite fat. It happened, though, I had no need of most or bear skins. Also, she was as willing as I was to live and let live. Just so I kept away from her cubs."

Mr. Ramill started to overtake him. "Lead ahead, Garth. I came here to see your prospect, not to talk about shooting."

Garth went on, up against the tundra. When he came to where the smooth slope dropped into a shallow trough, a backward glance showed the girl and Huxby loitering along behind her father. The portly millionaire came panting up beside Garth.

"Well," he asked.

"There's my claim," Garth answered. "My lower stake is down that cross dyke of gneiss, a thousand feet or so from the lake shore. The upper one stands about three hundred feet below those slide ledges. You could stake a claim above mine, but I doubt if you'd find pay dirt. There is none at all between the lower stake and the lake. The dyke stopped the down-drift of the alloy. I sampled several acres. Beginning at the grass roots and going down to frost, the dirt ran from five to ten dollars a pan. This trough is a placer pocket—a cache filled by the age-long down-drift from those disintegrated veins up the mountain. My claim covers all or nearly all the deposit, and it is worth several hundred thousand dollars, if not a million."

The cool certainty of Garth's statement compelled belief. Mr. Ramill's ruddy face went blank.

His daughter looked at Garth with a sudden change from boredom and disdain to an interest that verged on respect. Here was sensation—something new. The despoiled woods vagabond of the wilds was not a pauper, after all! It was like a play, the wandering beggar boy disclosing himself to be the true prince. He had said, "a million!"

Like the older man, Huxby had put on his poker face. He was not so successful, however, in keeping the glint out of his eyes. He had yet to make his fortune.

"So it's a million?" he scoffed. "No wonder you prospectors go crazy. Find a little placer you guess has some gold in it, and you think you've located a mint. Five to ten dollars a pan! Why, Jack, your metal wouldn't give you half a dollar a pan, even if your small percentage of gold was alloyed with silver, instead of lead."

Garth smiled. "My mistake bothering you to test that sample. Just chew on this, my friend: A good many soundboughs might not be able to identify that gray-white metal. But only a cheechako would be unable to recognize that it is not galena or silver."

The silence the engineer for the moment, Mr. Ramill favored Garth with his blandest smile.

"Technicians like Huxby are too apt to imagine that the rest of us know nothing. Now, admitting for the sake of the argument that your guess regarding the alloy is correct, suppose we sample your prospect?"

For reply, Garth led down into the trough to where a moss-bedded spring rill trickled down from pool to pool. He stopped beside a shallow dugout, roofed with spruce branches, moss and dirt. Under it lay a small shovel and pickax, a worn gold pan, and a little aluminum cooking pot.

Garth turned to Huxby. "There's the pan. Get your samples and go to it."

"How do I know your holes aren't salted?" "You don't know anything. Why not scratch down to gravel yourself? Or perhaps I salted all the trough, before I laid on this blanket of grass and moss."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Mining engineers have to guard against fraud as well as error, Garth. I was salted once myself, in my callow days. Just to ease his professional conscience, suppose you clear gravel for us midway between here and the staked hole down there."

"That's my discovery stake," Garth replied. "Wasn't looking for gold in this trough. Just happened to notice the gray metal where the spring gush of the rill had torn the moss from the gravel. About my digging, I must beg to be excused. What if I should happen to drop a handful of that galena into the hole, when your expert was not looking?"

Ignoring the irony, Huxby pulled the shovel from the dugout shelter and gouged into a bed of moss. Mr. Ramill stooped his portly body to pick up the gold pan.

Huxby shoveled clear the moss and black humus from a space two feet or more square. He tossed aside a few stones the size of his fist, and took the gold pan from Mr. Ramill to load it with gravel. They went a few steps downslope to the edge of a lower pool.

None too deftly, Huxby dipped water into the pan and began to rotate the contents. After more than twice the time an old prospector would have needed for the operation, the mining engineer worked the pan clear of all except a spoonful of small dull nodules.

Miss Ramill had stretched out to bask in the summer warmth. With the upstart of the sun towards the noon of the nineteen-hour day, the breeze had died down. The calm brought a swarm of mosquitoes up from the lake shore. The girl put on her headnet, covered the unbuttoned part of her legs with caribou moss, and resumed her sun bath.

Out of the tail of his eye Garth watched Huxby and Mr. Ramill. When he saw the two get their net-draped heads together over the gold pan, he rose and went towards them. The tread of his moccasins was noiseless.

Before the two noticed his approach, he stood looking down over their shoulders.

"Not half bad for a starter," he said. "At least five dollars in your first pan."

"Hardly that value," replied Mr. Ramill. "Admitting there is some platinum in this alloy, I am afraid you're a far too sanguine young man. Call it five per cent platinum and five of gold. That leaves ninety per cent of silver and lead, with of course traces of iridium and osmium."

"Yes, move the decimal point of your million three places to the left, Jack," said Huxby. "It brings your wonderful fortune down to a few thousands. To sluice this placer, freight out the alloy, and pay for separating the metals will leave slim profits. There may be none at all."

"Too bad you've had all your trouble for nothing," Garth replied. "I counted on your finding it a real strike—the first big platinum deposit located in North America."

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

"Never mind, my boy. You'll recall what I told you about my encouraging worthy prospectors. I stand by that now. I will give you two thousand dollars for this prospect, and take the chance of getting back my money by large-scale placering."

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

"You're too generous," Garth protested. "I couldn't think of taking your money. In fact, I'll have to own up I had a little testing acid with me when I happened upon this gray alloy. So, as I do not believe in cheating, suppose we head back for the Mackenzie."

The millionaire mine buyer chuckled and clapped him on the back. "Boy, you're a whole lot less a fool than you look."

Huxby stared hard. Then, pocketing the alloy, he went for the shovel.

"Good idea," Garth said. "A pan from above Discovery, one below, and the same from three or four hundred feet out each side—they'll tell you whether or not it's merely a small pocket."

Without replying, Huxby set off up the trough. Mr. Ramill limped slowly after him.

Miss Ramill appeared to have fallen asleep. She lay still, protected by her net from the mosquitoes that tinged about her head.

Relieved from the company of his unpleasant travel mates, Garth stretched out like the girl. He thought of the vast length of time that had been required to erode the side of the mountain above him. Nature had spent ages in collecting these hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of precious alloy upon which he now lay basking.

And he had chanced to stumble upon the treasure near the end of a trip of which exploration and prospecting only a side issue. Now, by law, he was sole owner of all this wealth.

He thought of the two men upslope whom he had brought to share in his good fortune. They had thanked him by seeking to lie and cheat him out of it all. But that was the nature of far too many men. There was no reason to be surprised or angered.

They had failed to outplay him with their stacked cards. He looked at a clump of alpine blossoms close beside his elbow, and smiled.

Upslope he heard the swirl of gravel in the gold pan. After a time the sound died out. His keen ear caught the dull tread of heavy feet on the turf.

Mr. Ramill turned toward Garth. "We will go back to the plane for lunch while considering the matter."

"Only for a short time," Huxby qualified. "I intend to return here for more sampling. No need of your troubling to join us."

Garth saw that his company was not wanted. "Thanks, I'm not hungry. Come to think, I'll go down to the lake and make sure my old lady grizzly isn't lurking in the bush."

"Your phantom bear," mocked Miss Ramill. "Watch out she doesn't make a ghost of you."

Under cover of his smile at the gibe, Garth caught the glance that passed between her father and Huxby. The girl had said it. "Watch out" was the word.

He swung down the trough with no sign of hurry. The length of his gliding stride made his movements appear leisurely. Without looking back, he slanted in among the scrubby spruces. A mass of the dense evergreens put him out of sight of the three cheechacos up on the open tundra. He turned sharp to the right. Midway down the brush-fringed lake shore, the tall spruces stood well spaced. He broke into a run.

A vista between the trees offered him a view upslope. He halted behind a screen of young aspens to look. The three had already reached the side of the trough. They started to hurry on aslant the mountainside. Lilith Ramill and Huxby had the girl's heavy-bodied father between them. They were helping him along twice as fast as he could have made it without their aid.

Alcohol in Body Cannot Ignite, Chemists Assert

According to popular belief, the body of a person soaked, with alcohol is combustible. Cases of the spontaneous combustion of the body have been reported, especially in France, when the first instance of this kind is said to have happened in 1725.

The spontaneous burning of an alcohol-soaked body is a popular belief in Rumania, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Prof. A. Elfer of Cluj, in a lecture before the Hygienic society, is reported by the Bucharest correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association as saying that "in past centuries it was earnestly deemed possible that the alcohol laden breath of a tippler may catch fire from the glow of an oven or even from his own pipe."

In 1847, the Countess Goritz was said to have become ignited spontaneously in Darmstadt, Germany, and burned to death. A commission whose members included the greatest chemical experts of the age, Leibig and Bischoff, studied this case and completely refuted the theory of spontaneous combustion.

EATS OATMEAL TO HELP KEEP FIT

It may be one of Nature's lowest cost foods, but lucky is the boy or girl who gets it for breakfast every morning.

Many are nervous, poor in appetite, system out of order, because their daily diets lack enough of the precious Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit, it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about 1/2c per dish.

Start serving it tomorrow for a 2-weeks test. Quaker Oats has a wholesome, nut-like, luscious appeal to the appetite. Flavors, surprisingly good. All grocers supply it.

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to stretch their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.
